THE COSMIC MUFFIN PRESENTS AN ASTROLOGICAL EVENING AT UNIVERSITY OF LOWELL

LOWELL, MASS. - The familiar radio voice of The Cosmic Muffin comes to the stage of Cumnock Hall at the University of Lowell, Monday, February 26, at 8:00 PM.

The Cosmic Muffin, otherwise known as Darrell Martinie, is a master student of psychology and astrology, and is acknowledged as New England's foremost young astrologer. A certified professional astrologer, Martinie offers an evening of cosmic speculation which includes a lecture and film, followed by a discussion with the audience.

Following his motto that says, "A wise person rules the stars, a fool is ruled by them," Martinie will explain what astrology is, talk about the stars' influence on our lives, and discuss how we can use astrology.

The lecture is sponsored by the cultural committee of the University of Lowell's student activities commission. Admission is free to University students and one dollar for the public.

Cumnock Hall is located on University Avenue, Lowell, and for more information contact the campus student information center at 452-5000, extension 345.
